Introduction

Local elections were held throughout the country in June, 1974. The elections were originally due to be held in 1972 but were twice postponed (to 1973 by the Local Elections Act, 1972 and to 1974 by the Local Elections Act, 1973). The elections were held on 18th June, 1974 and the local electorate voted for representatives on 27 county councils, 4 county borough councils, 56 borough and urban district councils and 22 town commissioners. A total of 3,234 candidates stood for 1,539 seats in 225 local electoral areas. In the case of one town (Lismore), town commissioners were returned without a contest. Consequent on the death of a candidate for the Dunshaughlin electoral area of County Meath the poll for that area was countermanded and a fresh election was held on 25th June, 1974.

In the interval since 1967 several important changes had been made in the law relating to local elections. These changes were effected by the Local Elections Act, 1972, the Electoral (Amendment) Act, 1973, the Local Elections (Amendment) Regulations, 1974, the Local Elections (Postal Voting) Regulations, 1974 and the Local Elections (Petitions and Disqualifications) Act, 1974.

The changes include:

(1) reduction of the voting age and the minimum age for membership of local authorities from 21 to 18 years,

(2) abolition of the arrangement under which a person could be registered as a local government elector by virtue of occupation of land or premises,

(3) removal of the disqualification for membership of local authorities in the case of non-citizens, clergymen and persons employed in the local government service,

(4) removal of the restrictions on the employment in the local government service of members of local authorities except in the case of positions the duties of which would be incompatible with local authority membership,

(5) provision of postal voting facilities for electors unable or likely to be unable to vote in person at their allotted polling station by reason of the circumstances of their employment, absence from the place at which registered, illness or physical disability or employment by a returning officer in connection with an election,

(6) strengthening of the safeguards for the secrecy of the ballot arising from the Supreme Court ruling in 1971 in the case of McMahon v the Attorney-General,

(7) provision of a new statutory procedure for questioning the result of a local election by petition to the Circuit Court.

A general review of local electoral areas had been carried out prior to the local elections. This was the first such review undertaken in over 30 years and was done with a view to achieving reasonable equality of representation on a population basis within each local authority. In many cases equality of representation had been affected by changes in the distribution of population. The review was undertaken in consultation with the local authorities and the Minister made new electoral area Orders in relation to the county boroughs of Dublin and Cork and the counties of Carlow, Clare, Donegal, Dublin, Galway, Kerry, Kildare, Leitrim, Limerick, Longford, Louth, Mayo, Meath, Roscommon, Sligo, Waterford, Westmeath and Wicklow. The Orders involved changes in the boundaries of existing electoral areas and/or changes in the number of councillors elected for such areas. The total membership of local authorities was not, however, affected by this review. Some municipal areas which were divided into local electoral areas for the 1967 local elections were again reverted to single electoral areas. These were Bray, Drogheda, Dundalk, Galway and Sligo.

The percentage of the electorate represented by valid votes cast at the 1974 local elections in comparison with those at previous local elections was as follows:

	1960 %	1967 %	1974 %
County Borough Councils, except Dublin	55	66	57
Dublin County Borough Council	29	51	39
County Councils	60	70	67
Borough and Urban District Councils	59	68	64
Town Commissioners	60	72	69

The overall average was 54% in the 1960 elections, 67% in the 1967 elections and 62% in the 1974 elections. The highest poll in 1974 was in Macroom Urban District where the valid poll represented 86% of the electorate and the lowest was in Dublin City where only 40% voted (valid poll 39%). The total poll in the elections of ten local authorities (including one county council) was 80% or over. Invalid votes at the elections represented 1.72% of the total votes cast.

The local elections of 1974 involved 225 separate elections and publication in book form of the full results of each election including particulars of the transfer of votes would be a very large undertaking. For this reason only the more important particulars in relation to the elections have been included here and where further information is required about the elections in any particular area reference should be made to the local authority concerned.

Pages 5 to 78 contain the following information for each electoral area in the 27 administrative counties and the 4 county boroughs:- the electorate, the valid poll, the number of seats and the quota or number of votes required for election; the number of candidates presented by each political party; the number and percentage of first preference votes received by each party and the names, addresses and political affiliations of the elected members.

The statistical tables given from page 79 onwards relate to all local authorities. Table A shows for each local authority in summary form the number of seats, the number of electors on the 1974/75 register, the total number of votes cast, the percentage of electors who voted, the number of invalid votes, invalid votes as a percentage of the total votes cast and the total valid poll. Table B shows for each local authority the number of candidates, the percentage of first preference votes and the number of seats for each political party. Table C contains an analysis of the invalid votes. Finally there is a table relating to postal voting. It indicates the number of persons who applied to vote by post in accordance with the provisions of the Local Elections (Postal Voting) Regulations, 1974 and gives a breakdown of applications by reference to the grounds on which the applications were based.

The information contained in this book is based on returns furnished by the local authorities.
