

European Parliament Election Results Ireland June 1989

The European Parliament's origins are in the Assembly established by the Treaty of Paris (1951) setting up the European Coal and Steel Community. When in 1957 the Member States signed the Treaty of Rome, establishing the European Economic Community (EEC) and the European Atomic Energy Community (EURATOM) they also established an Assembly. In each case the Assembly brought together delegations from the national parliaments of member states to oversee the work of the community institutions. In effect, one Assembly fulfilled the requirements of the three treaties.

By a resolution of 30 March, 1962, the Assembly decided to take the name European Parliament, a title officially adopted in the Single European Act (1985).

The Treaty of Rome (Article 138.3) required Parliament "to draw up proposals for elections by direct universal suffrage in accordance with a uniform procedure in all Member States". This it did on 17 May, 1960 and forwarded it to the Council so that it could "lay down appropriate provisions". But no decision was taken by Council despite pressure from the Parliament. Indeed no progress was made at all until the Paris summit of December 1974 when it was agreed that direct elections "should take place in or after 1978" and the European Parliament was requested to submit new proposals to replace its draft Convention of 1960. In January 1975 Parliament submitted the new draft and in September 1976 the Decision and Act on the election of the European Parliament by direct universal suffrage were signed by the Council in Brussels. The first elections took place in June 1979 and the second elections followed five years later in June 1984. The third elections took place in June 1989.

As provided in the Treaties, Parliament has on several occasions adopted proposals for a uniform system of election for the European elections. Council has not yet been able to agree on any such system.

The third European Parliament elections took place on 15 and 18 June 1989. This brochure gives the overall result for Ireland and the results of the count in each constituency, together with biographical details of elected members. Comparative information is given on the Northern Ireland constituency. A summary table is provided of results in other Member States.

The elections in Ireland, as elsewhere, were governed by the European Act of 1976 concerning the election of the representatives of the Assembly by direct universal suffrage. Pending the introduction of a common system, each country adopted its own provisions and the polls in Ireland in 1979, 1984 and 1989 were governed by the European Assembly Elections Act 1977, which specified the normal electoral system of the single transferable vote in four multi-member constituencies. The method of filling vacancies was changed, following representation by the European Parliament, by the European Assembly Elections Act 1984.

Elections in Northern Ireland were conducted using the single transferable vote system in a single three member constituency.
