

European Parliament Election Results Ireland June 1984

The European Parliament's origins are in the Assembly established by the Treaty of Paris (1951) setting up the European Coal and Steel Community. When in 1957 the six member states signed the Treaty of Rome, establishing the European Atomic Energy Community (EURATOM) and the European Economic Community, they also established an Assembly. In each case the Assembly brought together delegations from the national parliaments of member states to oversee the work of the Community institutions. In effect, one Assembly fulfilled the requirements of the three treaties.

By a resolution of 30 March, 1962 the Assembly decided to take the name European Parliament, and it is generally known by this name.

The Treaty of Rome (Article 138.3) required the Parliament to "draw up proposals for elections by direct universal suffrage in accordance with a uniform procedure in all Member States". This it did on 17 May, 1960, and forwarded it to the Council so that it could "lay down appropriate provisions". But no decision was taken, despite pressure from Parliament, and indeed no progress at all was made until the Paris summit of December 1974.

The Paris summit noted that direct elections should be achieved as soon as possible, and asked for proposals from the Parliament, on which they wished the Council to act in 1976. Direct elections could then take place any time in or after 1978. They agreed to give Parliament certain legislative powers. Parliament submitted the draft of a new convention in January 1975, and the Council took a decision in September 1976. The Council intended that the elections should be held in May-June 1978. In the event, delays in ratification in the member states delayed the elections by one year. They took place on 7 and 10 June, 1979, and the second elections followed five years later, though still not by a uniform electoral system. It is intended that the next elections, due in 1989, will be held on a uniform system.

Political Groups (as at November 1984)

The second European Parliament elections took place on 14 and 17 June, 1984. The electorate numbered some 200 million, and the turnout was 118.5 million, or 59%. This brochure gives the overall result in Ireland and the details of the count for each constituency, together with biographical details of elected members. Comparative information is given on the Northern Ireland constituency. A summary table is provided of results in the other Member States. The first elections to the European Parliament took place on 7 and 10 June, 1979; details of this election were given in EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT ELECTION RESULTS: IRELAND, JUNE 1979, published by this office.

The elections in Ireland, as elsewhere, were governed by the European Act of 1976 concerning the election of the representatives of the Assembly by direct universal suffrage. Pending the introduction of a common system, each country adopted its own provisions, and the polls in Ireland in 1979 and 1984 were governed by the European Assembly Elections Act 1977, which specified the normal electoral system of the single transferable vote in four multi-member constituencies (see map). The method of filling vacancies was changed, following representations by Parliament, by the European Assembly Elections Act 1984.

Elections in Northern Ireland in 1979 and 1984 were also conducted using the single transferable vote system, in a single constituency.
